

Northeast Georgia Regional COMMUNITY HEALTH NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Executive Summary

2025

Executive Summary

Background

As part of their commitment as a partnership of not-for-profit organizations, a collection of five hospitals and other community agencies studied northeast Georgia's community health needs for the 2025 Community Health Needs Assessment (CHNA). A CHNA is a measurement of the relative health or well-being of a given community, and is both the activity and end-product of identifying and prioritizing unmet community health needs. This assessment is conducted by gathering and analyzing data, soliciting community feedback, and evaluating past and future opportunities. As a result of the Affordable Care Act, non-profit hospitals are required to conduct a health needs assessment of the communities they serve every three years.

The following organizations partnered to conduct a CHNA for the communities they serve in the northeast Georgia region:

NGMC Gainesville & Braselton
NGMC Habersham
NGMC Lumpkin

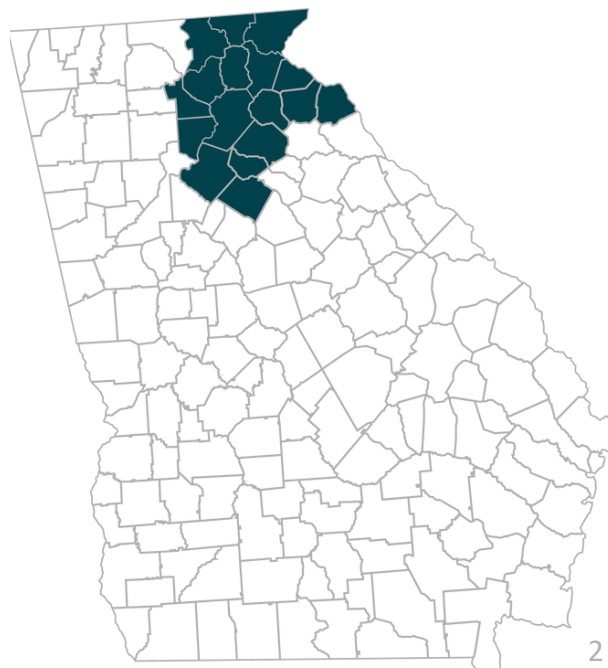

Stephens County Hospital
District 2 Public Health
Good News Clinics

Hospitals must prioritize identified significant health needs, adopt an implementation strategy, and make the CHNA publicly accessible. The assessment report is shared broadly via the Northeast Georgia Health System (NGHS) and Stephens County Hospital (SCH) websites. An interactive data tool is also available, which makes it easier for individuals and organizations to use the data. This tool can be found at www.NortheastGeorgiaCHNA.com.

Communities Included

Communities served by each partner overlapped and combined to include all or part of 17 counties in Northeast Georgia. These communities reflect the following service areas, which together comprise the region:

Executive Summary

History

Northeast Georgia Medical Center (NGMC) has conducted community health needs assessments since the late 1990s. It became required by law beginning in 2013. Stephens County Hospital began collaborating with NGMC in 2019.

Approach

Phillippa Lewis Moss and Monica Newton, D.O., are Co-Chairs for the Regional 2025 CHNA. Holly Lang of Public Goods Group (PGG) was engaged for her expertise on data collection and analysis. Phillippa Lewis Moss and Lisa Thomas of The ThoMoss Group facilitated focus groups and key stakeholder interviews. Online surveys were conducted: one for the general public and one for employees of the participating organizations. The surveys were available in English, Spanish, and Vietnamese. To ensure we heard from the community’s most vulnerable, we worked with community partners such as the Housing Authority, Good News Clinics, The Compass Center, and in homeless camps to conduct short face-to-face interviews for feedback. Over 3,600 community members’ voices were heard through focus groups, interviews, and surveys to gain insight into the greatest health needs of our community.

After a thorough review of data and public input, NGMC and SCH, with the help of community partners and advisors, prioritized the following needs and are working to create implementation plans.
